

Writing Our Next Chapter

Some truths are self evident. Or, sometimes, they may seem so obvious that we're likely to assume them without a second thought. Or worse, we forget about them entirely and go on about our day.

Here's a truth worth remembering and celebrating: There are no stories without storytellers.

For 15 years, Theatre Artists Studio has celebrated storytellers — our authors, writers, playwrights, schemers and dreamers. An important part of our mission has always been to encourage and nurture our member writers. As a result, The Studio currently has 17 playwrights who regularly contribute their talents to our stage, streaming and podcast productions, and our annual new play festival, New Summer shorts.

More than that, through our First Look program, we include you in the creative writing process with staged readings and audience talk-back discussions. You can meet our playwrights, chat with them and actually make a difference in how new stories evolve, helping our authors refine and polish their work.

Here's another self-evident truth: We can't continue to do this without you. We need your support. Please consider making a donation to help us support these gifted artists. Help us continue to bring these important new stories to you and the world.

Please, support our wonderful storytellers. Help us help them write the next chapter.
